

Wisconsin Needs Health Care Reform

Wisconsin citizens are losing health care every day.

In Wisconsin, 230 people are losing their health care every day during this economic crisis. Nationally, 14,000 people are losing their health insurance every day. [Center for American Progress Action Fund, 3/5/09]

Our broken health care system is hurting the Wisconsin economy.

The Wisconsin economy loses between $1.48 billion and $2.95 billion every year due to lost productivity stemming from the uninsured. And we are losing between $124 billion and $248 billion nationwide every year. [Center for American Progress, 5/29/09]

The average family premium in Wisconsin costs $900 more because our broken health care system fails to cover everyone. Nationally, the average family premium costs $1,100 more. [Center for American Progress, 3/24/09]

Wisconsin doctors support health care reform.

Dr. Beth Potter of Madison, WI says, “In the current system, what frustrates me the most is the lack of patient centered focus. I am frustrated by the barriers placed to provide appropriate care for patients. I am frustrated by the paperwork -prior authorization, consultation forms, etc that detract from direct patient care.” [Doctors for America, Voices of Physicians, <http://www.voicesofphysicians.org/>]

Dr. Jean Riquelme of Green Bay, WI says, “What frustrates me most is health care disparities that cannot be explained by income and insurance alone. I want health reform that recruits under-represented ethnic groups into high level health care jobs as nurses, pharmacists and physicians. To do so, we have to make education affordable so that primary care careers are more attractive.” [Doctors for America, Voices of Physicians, <http://www.voicesofphysicians.org/>]

Reforming our health care system is key to economic recovery.

Half of all people filing for home foreclosure nationwide in 2008 cited medical problems as a cause. [Christopher T. Robertson, Richard Egelhof, and Michael Hoke, “Get Sick, Get Out: The Medical Causes of Home Foreclosures,” Health Matrix 18 (2008): 65-105.]

Health care costs for small businesses have grown by 30 percent since 2000, and our manufacturers spend more per hour on health care than manufacturers in Canada, Japan, and the United Kingdom combined. The Coburn-Burr alternative unravels the employer-based system and keeps insurance companies in charge.

The Coburn-Burr plan does not provide sufficient protection for patients against abusive insurance company practices such as denying coverage to people with pre-existing conditions.

Insurance companies today use the flimsiest reasons to deny people coverage. For example, a woman in Los Angeles was denied coverage for her breast cancer because she failed to disclose that she had visited a dermatologist.

Under the Coburn plan, insurance companies could continue this practice—called “rescission”—which “has left thousands of Americans burdened with costly medical bills despite paying insurance premiums,” according to the Los Angeles Times.

The Coburn-Burr plan would also unravel the employer-based system and replace it with an insufficient tax credit that doesn’t even cover half of the average family’s medical costs.

The $5,700 per-family tax subsidy proposed in the Coburn plan is less than half of the $12,680 that the average American family paid for health care in 2008.
